Well done, well seasoned roast beef generously cut; potatoes, vegetables, salad and desert make up the menu. The restaurant people would run us out of business as unfair competitors if we were doing this every day.

Besides our dinner Sunday from 12 noon until 5 p.m. we have an abundance of entertainment on the grounds starting Friday night, Saturday night and of course Sunday afternoon and evening. Refreshments will be served on the grounds Saturday evening and Sunday evening. Rides, merry go round and ferris wheel for the children. Entertainment of more matured quality for the grown ups. No state fair will have anything on us for entertainment this weekend. The members of St. George's Church invite you to join them in their merry making this week. Washington, D. C. ORLEMANSKI-LANGE TALKS WITH STALIN

Two of the most important diplomatic reports of the war have been received at the White House recently, not from any trained diplomats, but from two private American citizens—Father Orlemanski of Springfield, Mass., and Prof. Oscar Lange, Polish-American leader and a teacher at the University of Chicago, both of whom had interviews with Stalin.

Although less widely publicized than Father Orlemanski's interview, Professor Lange had a long separate talk with Marshal Stalin and, perhaps because he was not circumscribed by church superiors, his report, on the whole, has been the more penetrating and helpful.

New conclusion drawn from the Lange-Orlemanski reports is that Polish-Russian relations, one of the most troublesome problems of the war, are on the eve of a wholesome rapprochement, probably beginning about now.

It was shortly after the receipt of the Lange-Orlemanski reports that President Roosevelt began a series of three conferences with Polish Premier Mikolajczyk in Washington, the results of which exceeded expectations.

If Polish-Russian relations can be settled amicably, one of the worst obstacles to postwar peace will be removed. Poland, for a hundred years partially governed by Russia, has a deep-rooted suspicion of the Soviet, while the Russians, having borne the main brunt of the European war on land, naturally feel they are entitled to areas forcibly wrested away from them after the last war.

STALIN DISCUSSES POLISH BOUNDARIES

In their separate interviews with Stalin, the two Polish-Americans, Father Orlemanski and Professor Lange, heard the reassuring words from the strong man of Russia that his government wants a "strong, independent Poland after the war—a Poland which will be strong both internally and externally, but which will be favorably disposed to the Soviet Union."

Stalin went even further and said that he was ready to help create a new Polish army.

"I am ready to build an army for Poland, equip it fully and arm it with the best guns the Soviet Union can make," he told Professor Lange. "I will do this for at least 1,000,000 men."

Stalin also discussed the question of Poland's future boundaries and revealed that they had already been discussed in some detail at Teheran. In doing so, he let drop a very important point—that, at Teheran, Roosevelt and he had agreed to the breakup of Germany after the war.

"Poland should claim East Prussia," Stalin said, "and should also claim Upper Silesia and all the German territory, up to the Oder river, including Stettin."

NOTE—This would give Poland practically all of Pomerania, a great stronghold of Prussian militarism. Shortly after Teheran, this columnist reported that the Big Three had proposed giving Pomerania, East Prussia and Silesia to Poland, in order to separate the Prussian junkers from the rest of Germany and stamp out German militarism for keeps.

Stalin told his visitors that he was not sure whether Poland should get Breslau (in Silesia) or not.

When these plans for Poland had come up at Teheran, Stalin disclosed, President Roosevelt had been in complete agreement, but Prime Minister Churchill had hesitated.

"He asked me: 'Who is to guarantee the security of this new Polish state?' I answered him simply: 'The armed might of the Soviet Union.'"

POLES IN RUSSIA

Professor Lange had been permitted to visit with the Polish army inside Russia which is fighting side by side with the Red army. He also had talked with various Polish leaders inside Russia, and he told Stalin that he was deeply moved by the splendid treatment given the Polish army by the Red army.

Several Days after Professor Lange had arranged with Wanda Wasiliewska, head of the pro-Soviet Union of Polish Patriots, to better the living conditions of Polish refugees in Russia, Stalin informed Mme. Wasiliewska that better war conditions now permitted better living conditions and that Polish refugees should share in the improvement.

SCORES POLISH INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

Stalin was quite cynical about the Polish intelligence service inside Poland and the reports of alleged conditions it had made to Premier Mikolajczyk. All it did, he said, was deceive the Polish government-in-exile in London.

Foreign Commissar Molotov, who was present during the interview, interrupted at this point to say that, in a recent speech, Premier Mikolajczyk had claimed he had the support of 90 per cent of the Polish people.

Big Pull Behind Allied Push

Not far behind the Allied Fifth and Eighth armies who are pushing the Germans out of Italy come the hundreds of refugee families who are taking the road back to their homes. This family is typical. Lacking transportation, the family uses its man (and woman) power to haul its worldly possessions on a farm cart.

Drang Nach Osten in Reverse

The Red army's drive to coincide with the Allied invasion of western Europe has brought the Russians nearly 200 miles nearer to Berlin. The map above shows how the Russians put the squeeze on strategic Minsk, gateway to Warsaw and Berlin. All routes of escape, except dirt roads through marshes and forests, fell into Russian hands.

Veterans at New Secret Base

Sergt. G. S. McCall of Augusta, Ga., meets two young Russian women soldiers at one of the new secret air bases in Russia being used by U. S. planes for shuttle bombing. Both women are 21 years old and veterans of the battles of Leningrad and Stalingrad. Several of these bases are now being operated by U. S. air forces in Russia.

American engineers are shown surveying a 700-foot steel and concrete unfinished ramp in Normandy, which is believed to have been planned for use by the Germans as a launching site for rocket bombs. WOMAN'S PART IN NATIONAL LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Judges 4:1-9, 13-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?—Esther 4:14.

Women of our day have unprecedented liberty of action and almost limitless opportunity to show their ability to meet responsibility and to accomplish great things. They are measuring up to that opportunity both in the armed services and in the multitude of tasks they are creditably carrying on in civilian life.

To those who seem surprised at their response to the nation's need, the church could well testify that women have always served well in those things which count most for God and country.

I. A Woman Can Rule (vv. 1-5).

God has established an order in the world which places woman where she best fits—in the home. There, under the guidance and with the help of her husband, she exerts her most powerful influence in the rearings of children. That is her normal, most effective and most blessed position.

But all too often conditions in the world are not normal, and woman, like man, is thrown out of the customary orbit of existence. Deborah faced such a day. Israel had sinned and been given over to the chastising hand of the Canaanite. Then God heard their repentant cry and was ready to send a deliverer—as He did in the case of each of the judges. Apparently no man was ready to take up the responsibility, or willing to thus serve God, and so He called Deborah. She sat under her palm tree and Israel came to her for judgment.

She typifies many women who have been the leaders of their people, and her story has been an inspiration to women in the church. May many more be encouraged to take up the weighty problems of moral and social righteousness, which the men of our nation (and others) do not seem to care or dare to attack!

II. A Woman Can Lead (vv. 6-9).

Barak was a man of ability. Deborah gave him full credit for his capable service (5:1, 12), but evidently he lacked that initiative which would send him into conflict with his people's enemies. Without Deborah he would not go (v. 8), under her leadership he was willing and courageous.

It is easy to ridicule Barak, and no doubt he deserves some measure of censure, but let us not be too severe on him. When the records are all in, it will be known that many of the feats of courage, the high and noble decisions, the victories in the fields of science and culture, and particularly those things that have been accomplished in and through the church, were the result of the leadership of some woman.

Many are the distinguished national and spiritual leaders who have said that all they were and had accomplished they owed to their mothers. Others speak with high appreciation of a noble and inspiring wife.

Think also of the many social and religious causes which have been largely carried on by determined and sacrificial women. Yes, a woman can lead, and often she must lead out to get the men to follow.

Not all the pursuits of life are lived out in peace or in preparation for war. The time comes when battle must be joined, and then we see that

III. A Woman Can Fight (vv. 13-16).

True it is that it was Barak who led his army, but he went out at the word of Deborah. Hers was the responsibility for strategy, for the determining of that important D-day, when the blow must be struck.

The courage of women in the battles for country makes an inspiring story. Not the least of that courage has been shown by those who have quietly stood "by the stuff" at home, who have bravely parted with their cherished loved ones, who have borne the dark hours of loneliness, uncertainty and often of heart-piercing sorrow. They shall not be without their reward (see I Sam. 30:24).

This is the place to say a further word of appreciation of the women of the church who have fought such a valiant fight against liquor, social degradation, vice, evil politics, etc. "Hats off to them!" May they be encouraged to go on.

Then too, one ought to say a word of sad and earnest admonition to those countless women who have used their great freedom in our day as a license to live wicked and ungodly lives. They do not have the courage to stand against the loose moral standards, the common acceptance of intoxicants, the immodest apparel of the day.

Christian women have the golden opportunity of setting a fine pattern of useful living now. Let them make the most of it, for the glory of God.

When Your Back Hurts

And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

DOAN'S PILLS

CHAPTER I

It never in the world ever occurred to Mr. Winkle that he would be drafted and sent off to the wars. War was for young men, not for a settled married man of forty-four.

There was talk of the Army not wanting the older men, but nothing had yet been done about this. The thing being done was what Mr. Winkle received in this morning's mail. When he reached in the mailbox and took out the communication from his draft board, his hands trembled a little. Peering through his metal-rimmed glasses, he read that he was classified 1-A.

He knew what that meant. After ten days' time, he was subject for induction into the United States Army.

He stood there on the front steps of his house, a small man engulfed by a tremendous event that toppled over his world and sent it bowling off into space like a cannon ball. He thought:

Not he, who had been married for twenty years. Not he, a former careful accountant who was now the conservative proprietor of a modest general repair shop located in the alley back of his house. Not he, with his overly active and morbid imagination. Not he, who was no man of action, but was afraid to death of guns or violence of any sort.

Not he, with his stored-up memory of how, as a boy with his .22

Peering through his metal rimmed glasses he read he was classified 1A. rifle, he had shot a squirrel. The tiny animal fell from the high branch where he aimed at it, landing with a thud on the hard ground. When he held the warm, fuzzy body in his hand, he was sick at heart at what he had done. In later life, when he stepped on an ant, or squashed a spider, or even swatted a fly, Mr. Winkle felt squeamish at taking life.

Upon being called by his draft board last week for physical examination, Mr. Winkle had thought that the strange doctor appreciated his dyspepsia, his nearsightedness, his caved-in chest, his good beginning on a paunch (even though otherwise he was skinny enough to be underweight), his jumped-up pulse at the slightest exertion, and his general make-up of no great muscularity.

Never before had Mr. Winkle known himself to be such a physical wreck.

The doctor pursed his lips at the visual evidences of this close approach to the grave. He frowned in such a manner as to give Mr. Winkle reason for counting on his not being recommended. And though the doctor and the members of the draft board, working their mysterious ways, had not committed themselves on the result, it still hadn't seemed real to Mr. Winkle that he would be seriously considered as a soldier.

The notice couldn't mean him. He looked at it again, to see if, possibly, there had been some mistake. But he saw his name typed out boldly: Wilbert George Winkle.

The thought of going in and telling Mrs. Winkle about it swept over him. The prospect of this was one of both panic and intense interest. Certainly it would take a lot of the strong wind out of her sails.

Mrs. Winkle, during recent years, had developed into a positive individual who was prone to run her husband the way a locomotive engineer kept his hand on the throttle. Mr. Winkle never liked to put this into the actual term of henpecking, but nevertheless that was the true state of affairs.

Now he wondered how Amy would take it. There was little she could do about it. She wouldn't be able to argue with this, nor impose her will in any way upon it. He felt a little sorry for her, for he knew that deep down, in spite of her sharp words and orders, she loved him and he loved her. Beyond his speculation on how she would receive the news, he had a reluctance about telling her.

Yet he didn't see what else he could do. With a sigh, he went into the house.

Mrs. Winkle was already behind her half of the newspaper in the breakfast nook, which was all the dining room their small house possessed. Mr. Winkle, in his mind, could look right through the paper and see her, a well-filled-out lady of exactly his own age. To a person seeing her for the first time, she appeared dainty in spite of her plumpness, quite feminine, and of an eminently good nature. It was a shock, upon second glance, to notice the way her lips pressed themselves together and the perpetual frown that creased the otherwise smooth pink skin between her blue eyes.

Amy paid no attention as Mr. Winkle carefully stepped over Penelope, the third member of the family.

Their sad-eyed spaniel was settled on the floor with her black muzzle resting on her paws. At eight, Penelope in her dog world was approximately Mr. Winkle's comparative age in the human world. She was as amiable and mild as Mr. Winkle himself. Never having been allowed a husband, she had a rather droopy disposition. Now, in her middle age, she had given up hope and no longer pretended to any interest at the sight of a male, but simply sniffed loftily or ignored the meeting altogether.

Penelope, Mr. Winkle thought, was no more prepared for the large, adventurous and dangerous things of life, such as war, than he.

He sat heavily in his place in the breakfast nook. From behind her paper, Mrs. Winkle demanded, "Anything for me?"

"No-o," answered Mr. Winkle.

At his drawing out of the word, Mrs. Winkle put her paper aside and looked at her husband. She didn't see what he had received, for he held it below the table. But from the look of Mr. Winkle and the tone of his voice, she knew at once.

Mrs. Winkle was the first to speak again. Her frown deepened and her lips were tight when she stated disapprovingly, "Wilbert, your notice has come."

Silently, Mr. Winkle handed over the notice to her.

Mrs. Winkle took it in at a single glance. Her face went white. Her frown disappeared and her mouth softened. She looked bewildered, as if props had been knocked out from under her and she had no solid ground to stand on. She said breathlessly, as if caught off guard, "You're going to war."

Mr. Winkle cleared his throat so as to be sure he could control his own voice, trying it out this way without first chancing how it might sound. "It means," he explained, "I'm just being passed on to the Army doctors."

"You're going to war," Mrs. Winkle repeated in a whisper. Now she looked actually frightened, amazed, and hurt.

It had been years since Mr. Winkle had seen such expressions on his wife's face. They affected him deeply. He began, "Now, Amy—"

"You'll be killed!" Mrs. Winkle wailed.

At this excitement, and perhaps at the new, strange tone in Mrs. Winkle's voice, Penelope began to howl.

Mr. Winkle had counted on no such behavior on the part of his wife. He had become so accustomed to her shrewish ways that he hadn't pictured them being punctured so abruptly.

He realized what a blow it was to her. She was threatened with not having him around to order about.

To have him removed from her and sent off to war destroyed her defenses and left her bewildered and alone. It revealed the basic affection she had for him. Mr. Winkle reflected that it was taking the greatest war in history to accomplish this.

From the look on her face, Mr. Winkle almost expected Amy to begin weeping. But she didn't. She just sat there staring at him, her eyes bright and wide and dry, and he sat staring at her. They regarded each other awesomely while Penelope continued to howl.

Penelope was interrupted by the shrill ringing of the telephone. Mr. Winkle made a movement to go into the living room to answer it, but Mrs. Winkle, with a rather wild look on her face, started before he did. She appeared to want to do something definite.

Sitting in the breakfast nook, Mr. Winkle heard her voice.

"Why, yes . . . I suppose so," she faltered. "Just a minute."

Any hesitancy didn't sound like Amy at all. Rather, it sounded like the Amy of years ago, when Mr. Winkle married her.

Her voice came again, calling in to him, "It's the newspaper—they want to come out and interview you."

Alarmed at this, and at Amy asking his advice about something instead of deciding it herself, Mr. Winkle asked, "Me? Now? Here?"

Mrs. Winkle gave an affirmative answer to each of these questions, her words sounding like strangled chirps.

Mr. Winkle thought, desperately. Suddenly, he wanted to lash out at something. "Certainly not," he said. "I can't wait around here. I've got to get to the shop. And I don't tell them I don't want to be interviewed."

Mrs. Winkle passed on his views over the telephone. They didn't seem to make much impression, for Mrs. Winkle, after listening to what was said in reply, kept agreeing doubtfully, "Yes . . . yes, but—oh, I can see that's probably right."

She hung up and came back. She appeared to be slightly dazed.

"They said," she told Mr. Winkle, "that you're already something of a celebrity—from being the first married man in the older men's classification to be drafted—and that it's your patriotic duty to set a good example. They're coming out here to take pictures of—of us both."

"I won't do it," he said. "And you shouldn't—"

"But, Wilbert," Mrs. Winkle protested, "it won't look right if we don't."

"I don't care how it looks. Where's my hat?" He was emboldened to be peremptory. "Where's my lunch box?"

He saw them both where they were kept ready for his departure to business. He snatched them up almost savagely, and clamped the hat on his head. He hadn't felt so aroused for many years. He didn't quite know what to make of the way

It wasn't until he had gone some way that it occurred to him he had forgotten to kiss his wife goodbye.

he felt, for there was fear mixed in him, too, along with his unaccustomed anger. Mainly, there was the sense of being unnerved by an unsure Amy.

He turned, and marched to the front door. Mrs. Winkle followed him. "Wilbert," she said weakly, "you have to, and you know it."

By the time he reached the steps outside, Mr. Winkle had somewhat calmed. His small storm was nearly over. He blinked. "I suppose," he admitted, "I'll have to do a lot of things I don't feel like doing."

Abruptly, he strode away, down the walk, and then along the street. It wasn't until he had gone some way that it occurred to him he had forgotten to kiss his wife goodbye. It was the first time he had neglected this ritual in their whole married life. Ordinarily, he would have been called back and given instructions. But there was no sound from Amy.

Guiltily, he glanced once behind, to see her still standing on the steps, her hand at her throat, watching him depart. Penelope was at her feet, staring after him mournfully.

It may seem curious that, though Mr. Winkle's place of business was located right in back of his house, he didn't go out through the rear door and across the fifty feet of yard to reach his shop.

To the Winkles this wasn't strange at all. There was a good reason for it.

It originated from Mr. Winkle's career as a public accountant having disappeared during the depression. Secretly, he was just as glad, for he had never cared much for dealing in long rows of someone else's figures. He greatly preferred tinkering with mechanical things, for which he had a decided flair and a delicate touch.

HIGH COSTS REPORTED ON COLLECTIVIST PROJECTS
ONE OF THE NEW DEAL theoretical ideas for aid to the down-trodden farmer was the establishment of collectivist farms under government management. It was the product of the brain of Rexford Tugwell when he was assistant secretary of agriculture, and was supposed to be along the lines of the Russian collective, government-managed farms.

Recently Democratic Congressman Harold D. Cooley of North Carolina offered some figures showing what results were attained. There were 197 such projects established in the United States, one of the larger ones being the Scuppernon homesteads of 11,300 acres in North Carolina, with a government investment of $796,000, an average of $11,000 for each farm family involved and settled on the land.

It was a strictly and completely government-managed property, including farm, community and home managers. The loss on operation alone to June, 1942, amounted to $74,000. When to that loss were added interest on the investment and government loans to the farm families, it meant a cost to the government of $18,000 for each one of the farm families, no one of which was permanently benefited.

Scuppernon is a sample of government management, but it was not the most costly of the 197 collectivist farm experiments. In all, 15,500 farm families were involved in these experiments, none of which were permanently benefited. On the other hand, the Farm Security administration, by a simple rehabilitation loan program, rendered material aid in putting 950,000 farmers on their feet. Of the amount due on those loans, 93 per cent has been repaid. The loans meant the creation of opportunity for the individual to help himself—the maintenance of his American self-respect and his operation under the private enterprise system.

The American farmer is too much of a sturdy individualist to take kindly to, or develop under, any system of regulation or regimentation. He can manage his own affairs.

NATIONAL DEBT JUST KEEPS GOING UP

YEARS AGO, back in 1880, when I was but a small boy, a group of town and farm patriarchs would sit around the big wood-burning stove in the general store of the village of Ainsworth, Iowa. Their discussions centered frequently on national affairs and especially the, to them, appalling national debt occasioned by the cost of the Civil war. Some of them harked back to the good old days of 1840 when the national debt amounted to but 21 cents per capita, with a national population of but 17 million. In 1880, because of the cost of the Civil war, it stood at the, to them, staggering sum of $1.69 per capita, with a population of over 50 million. I wonder what those good citizens of 1880 would say of conditions of today with a national debt of well beyond $1,300 per capita, over $6,000 for the average-sized family. Those patriarchs realized they and their children had to pay that debt of 1880, and we and our children must pay, each his full share, the debt of today and tomorrow and next year. We have reason to demand economy in the civilian activities of government.

PAY FARMER FOR PRODUCING NEEDED ITEMS

A CASTOR BEAN PLANT persists in growing in my yard. Each time I see it I am reminded of the more than 50 million we pay to farmers in other lands for the castor beans we import each year. With a bit of encouragement in the way of a protected home market, or a small subsidy to provide a start, that 50 million dollars might be going to American farmers. There are but few, if any, sections in the United States in which castor beans would not grow. In addition to what we are now importing we could use more, far more, as a substitute for wood pulp in the making of paper. We are depending upon imports for more than 60 other products that could be raised on American farms if we were inclined to encourage their production. The total would add hundreds of millions to our farm income. We could pay the farmer for producing rather than for not producing.

DOING YOUR BEST ON EVERY JOB

NOT ALL OF US HAVE the ability to fill executive positions, but the demand for executives is never entirely filled. We are not capable of judging our own qualifications for such a job, others must do that for us. What it takes we can demonstrate by doing our best on each job we hold on the way to the top. Chances are if we do not achieve our ambition it is because of something lacking on the part of the aspirant.

Tiny First Clothes

NICEST present you could possibly give a young mother—a charming, pretty and practical set of little dress, petticoat, panties and romper. Make them of very small moss-rose patterned dimity or of pastel colored percales.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1982 is designed for sizes 6 months, 1, 2, 3 years. Size 1, dress, requires 1 3/4 yards of 35 or 39-inch material; play suit, 7/8 yard; slip and panties, 1 3/4 yards.

When you purchase brown sugar place it in a glass jar and put in a small piece of bread, which will dry out and the sugar will stay soft.

The window sills will be easier to keep clean if you wax them each time after washing.

For softening and removing old paint and varnish, use a rag to cover the surfaces with a mixture of two parts spirits of ammonia and one of turpentine. In difficult spots, apply with a handbrush.

To wash small pieces of fragile lace, put in a fruit jar filled with suds, shake vigorously for a few minutes, then rinse in the same way.

To remove paint from your hands, try fingernail polish remover. It works like magic and does not leave an odor like turpentine does when you use it. I also find polish remover just the thing for taking off the gum left on your skin after removing an adhesive bandage.

"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE"

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get Soretone! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Tinley Servicemen's Letters

Somewhere in England June 1, 1944

Dear Friends:

I have been wanting to write to you for some time but never seemed to get to it but being as I have a little time tonight, will try to write a few lines.

I received your package quite some time ago and want to thank you for it, the crackers and cheese sure did hit the spot. But sure disappeared in a hurry. Have been receiving the Tinley Times right along, sure is interesting to read it.

We have been having wonderful weather here right along although it gets quite cool at times. England sure is a picturesque country in the spring of the year, but what I wouldn't give to be back in good old Tinley Park.

I see by the Tinley Times that the boys are scattered all over the world I haven't seen any of the fellows from home over here lately, guess they are all quite busy all the time.

Well I guess I'll close for now, hope to see you all before long.

As ever,

Fred Meyer

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know I received the Easter card and package that you sent to me all in good shape. Just the mere word of thanks doesn't seem appropriate to tell you folks back home, but it is all that I can say at the present time, maybe sometime in the future I can show my appreciation more fully other than saying just thanks, anyway I was sure glad to receive it so I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know that I'm still alive.

I sure hope this finds you all in the best of health. I can't very well give you a description of this place I guess it is almost all jungle and it is lousy with all kinds of and little insects of all descriptions, lizards, birds and other things too numerous to mention. They say it rains here about 150 inches a year and I am beginning to believe it. I hear you are having quite a bit of rain in Illinois. I suppose it is rather chilly there too when it rains all the time. I am still getting the Tinley paper, it is rather old when I get it but still interesting.

I guess there are quite a few fellows from Tinley down here. I wish I could meet a few of them sometime. I am sending a little poem that I read in a magazine awhile back, think it voices the opinion of all the fellows in the Army, Navy, and Marines: I'll travel a lot in the Army

But no matter where I roam, I'll try Mke hell to beat My dog tags home.

Boy there sure will be some good times for awhile when this is all over. There sure will be a lot of happy people in the world. Well folks I guess I'll have to close now hoping this finds you all well. So good night and God bless and keep you all.

Sincerely, your friend

Oliver V. Barr

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Life" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 16.

The Golden Text was, "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5: 12).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Then said Jesus unto them again. . . The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. . . And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand" (John 10: 7, 10, 23, 29).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is divine Life, and Life is no more confined to the forms which reflect it than substance is in its shadow. If life were in mortal man or material things, it would be subject to their limitations and would end in death. Life is Mind, the creator reflected in His creations. . . Life is divine Principle, Mind, Soul, Spirit. Life is without beginning and without end. Eternity, not time, expresses the thought of Life, and time is no part of eternity" (pp. 331, 468).

News-Bulletin

Dear Sirs:

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad J. Oetter of Frankfort have received word from their son Sgt. Kenneth L. Oetter of his safe arrival somewhere in New Guinea. Sgt. Oetter left the states shortly after his 21st birthday which was June 3rd. He has been in the service since March 1st, 1943. Prior to his induction he was employed by the E. J. & E. Ry., in Whiting, Indiana.

He is a graduate of J. T. H. S. where he also was a member of the Military Band.

Thank You, Faye June Oetter

The following letter was received by Mrs. Edw. Batson, whose son Sgt. Wm. Batson is serving in the armed forces, from a woman in England at whose home Sgt. Batson has been a guest:

Dear Mrs. Batson:

This letter is sure to be a big surprise to you. Your son Billy has been staying with us for two nites while passing through this town. We got to talking about home and quite naturally he spoke about you. Perhaps you wonder what he is doing these days. Well if any U. S. planes are unlucky enough to come down, he, with other boys, go around and salvage them. A lot of planes pass over here on their way to the French coast all day and all night. A few weeks ago a bomber crashed on its way out on a raid, and it crashed with a full load about 200 yards from our house. We were very scared and upset as all the dear boys lost their lives. They were U. S. boys and we are very proud of them as through their skill in landing in a field they saved a lot of civilian lives. We were more than upset over that crash than any air raid, we don't ever want to see anything like that again.

You will be very happy to know that we have been free from raids just lately. In the past we have had some narrow escapes. At one time we had all our windows blown out and our bedroom ceilings all down on us due to blasts from nearby bombs. Now we have forgotten all about it as our windows are back in and ceilings repaired. It is very surprising what you can get used to and we stop moaning when we see so many poor souls worse off than we. Well my dear friends, you probably have heard the great news about our boys invading France.

What a pity there has to be loss of life. They are such brave good boys, yours and our together. They go with no thought of themselves to liberate those people who are oppressed so that we may all be free. We can only say, God Bless them all, Bill and his pal were with us when we heard the good news and they were very excited and wished they could be there too. I hope you don't think I'm selfish when I say I'm glad they were here. Billy is very well and a fine boy. He has not had much chance to write to you lately, so you will have his love and best wishes through me to all his folks and friends and rest happy that he is OK and in fine spirits.

I have a daughter in the ATS, age 20. She is a driver and likes it very much, she has been in three years. My son age 15 and a half is in the army, cadet force he is a lance corporal, and attends parades on Monday and Wednesday evenings and Sunday mornings. He is a crack shot in his Co. His name is Walter and he works in a shipyard as rivet boy. My girl's name is Primrose. I miss her very much as I was only 20 when she was born, and while she grew up we went everywhere together. When she went in the forces she was only 17 just a young girl, now she drives a big truck or car and is not our little girl anymore. That's what war does for you but we can't help feeling very proud of the grand work all our sons and daughters are doing.

Oh well, you must think this is a very one sided letter as its all about ourselves, but Bill said you would like to know about our life so I just told you what I thought you would like to know. Billy is coming back to sleep tonight so I will try to get him to write a few lines to you before he goes to bed, but I can't promise.

Well Mrs. Batson I have to say bye for now, so with our love and best wishes I wish you good night and God bless you all. May your loved ones be united with you soon. My husband also sends his regards.

Yours sincerely,
Mrs. P. E. Griffiths, Erith,
Kent, England

Broil These DeLuxe Hamburgers

Looking for a recipe to keep cool? Just pop all your supper foods into the broiler. It will cook them quickly, save fuel, and keep cook and kitchen cool during warmer days.

It's a good idea to serve broiler meals in the gay informality of the porch or garden. Give the family a real picnic, minus the sand and mosquitoes, of course.

Cooking in the broiler gives that grand outdoor flavor much like the foods cooked over open fires of the beach or woods. Broiler cooking, however, is much simpler. To do it, just light the flame and set the temperature controls at 350° F. Best results are obtained when this temperature is maintained throughout the whole broiling period.

"Bottled" and "tank" gases provide regular gas service in farm and suburban areas where city gas mains do not reach. These liquefied petroleum gases make possible the clean, hot flame so desirable for broiling. Broiled foods are not only more appetizing, but easily digested.

Here is a good porch-picnic supper menu, with all foods except dessert prepared in the broiler unit.

Broil hamburgers first, and when they are almost done, pop in halved fresh tomatoes sprinkled with salt and pepper and buttered crumbs. Broil for about 10 minutes. During the last 5 minutes, toast split, buttered buns and heat the potato chips. Serve with cole slaw salad. Fresh strawberries and cream is the dessert suggestion.

DeLuxe Hamburgers.

(Serves 6)

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 tablespoon minced onion
- 1/4 cup catsup
- 1 cup sliced onion
- 8 slices bacon

Combine meat, egg, seasonings, and catsup; mix well. Form into thin patties. Brown sliced onion in hot fat. Put meat patties together, sandwich fashion, with sliced onion in between. Press edges together; wrap with a bacon slice and fasten with toothpick. Place patties on broiler rack 3-5 inches from heat. Broil 7 minutes on each side.

Try This "Egg Shortcake" Recipe

American hens have set new records in production and eggs are cheap and plentiful now. They're nutritious, too, rich in iron, vitamins A, B, and D, and also contain calcium, phosphorus and thiamine. They can be used in breakfast, lunch or supper dishes.

The flexible, easily controlled gas range is practical for cooking eggs, because they must be cooked slowly to prevent the protein from becoming tough. No longer are the advantages of modern gas cookery limited to city housewives, for home-makers everywhere, in cities, semi-rural or rural communities, are using liquefied petroleum gases as cooking fuel. This fuel, known as "bottled" or "tank" gas, is being delivered to nearly 2,000,000 homes away from the city gas mains.

Protein-rich eggs are point-free and make satisfying main dishes. Try them creamed, in between layers of shortcake, as in this recipe:

Egg Shortcake.

(Serves 6)

- 6 hard-cooked eggs
 - 3 tablespoons butter or substitute
 - 3 tablespoons flour
 - 1 1/4 cups milk
- Rich Shortcake Dough.
- Melt butter, blend in flour. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook until thickened, then add sliced hard-cooked eggs and cook for a few minutes. Serve between layers of shortcake and garnish with quarters of egg, paprika and parsley.

Two Recipes for Point-Free Pork

Point-free pork is good eating if thoroughly cooked to bring out the full, rich flavor.

Rural housewives who have modern gas ranges supplied with "bottled" or "tank" gas are fortunate, for they can easily maintain the constant low temperature necessary to cook pork so it is uniformly browned, with a crisp but not hard crust so that it slices neither crumbly nor dry.

Cooking pork is fuel-saving because of the low temperature used, and that, too, is important, for butane and propane in these gases have gone to war. They fortify high-test aviation gasoline, treat and cut metals, and make synthetic rubber and dynamite.

Here are point-wise recipes for homemakers who want to take advantage of economical pork cuts:

Dramsticks.

(Serves 6)

- 1 1/4 pounds lean pork, ground

- 3/4 cup fine bread crumbs
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 tsp. grated onion
- 1/2 cup milk

Combine all ingredients. Mix well. Shape into cakes resembling drumsticks. Insert a wooden skewer into each cake. Roll in crumbs or flour. Brown in hot fat. Cover. Fry over very low flame about 20 minutes longer. Brown 2 tbsp. flour in 2 tbsp. pan drippings. Add 1 cup hot water. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Season with salt and pepper.

Sausage Rolls.

(Serves 4)

- 12 link sausages
 - 12 thin slices of bread
- Broil sausages. Remove crusts from bread. Roll each sausage in slice of bread. Toast under broiler. Garnish with tomato wedges and parsley.

Dear Mrs. Kuspe:

The happy time has again arrived when a line or two of thanks is in order. Due to an omission in my address, the dainty box of palatable candy met with some delay. I've righted the error which will be found on the envelope. Regardless of precious moments lost, the sentiment as well as the contents were highly appreciated. I give you women credit for your perfect choice and Wieboldts for the grand art in the mixture of sweets. I also wish to extend my gratitude to you and Mr. Semmler for the never failing promptness in mailing of the Orland Park Herald. Needless to say, news from the home front is a soothing remedy in more cases than one.

To all the people in good old Orland, I want to express my sincere wishes and forward a pleasant hello

As ever,

16 Dog Bite Cases Reported in Cook Co.

Sixteen dog bite cases were reported to the Sheriff's Highway Police during June. This number is large.

And apparently, there are other sections of Illinois where the situation is more threatening. A news item yesterday quoted Dr. F. W. McCord, County Health Supervisor for Morgan County, as reporting twelve cases of rabies in dogs in that county since May 25. The item also said that about forty Jacksonville (county seat of Morgan County) residents were taking the pasteur treatment as a result of contact with infected dogs.

A majority of the persons bitten in Cook County outside of the City in June were children, although several women and a few men make up the list of sixteen.

The Sheriff's Highway Police are complying with the State law and Chicago Health Department rules with reference to dog bites. These contemplate that the dog will be tied up and kept under observation for fifteen days, rather than killing to ascertain whether the dog is affected with rabies. If the dog develops rabies within that period vaccine is applied to the victim in twenty-one doses, two doses a day for the first seven days, and one dose for the succeeding seven days.

This procedure is followed, except when the victim is bitten in the nose or mouth. In such cases the vaccine is applied immediately, and the dog killed.

In Chicago no human rabies cases have been found in 1944, but the City Health Department has found rabies in thirteen dog heads. Three of these were in June, and none so far in July.

Dear Len, Edith and Johnny:

Just wrote to the folks and Norma. I got a letter from them today.

I expect you know I'm in France now. I can't say much but I've seen action and am OK. As far as France goes it seems to be alright, except that it is hot, and its not the weather.

I haven't received the cookies you sent. Probably won't for a long time now. The mail is coming in now so we do get letters.

Well I hope everyone and everything is OK. Hope it has let up on the rain.

Love, Don.

GAS tronomy
HERE'S A HANDY

Busy farm wives find broiling a highly suitable method for cooking meat because it's time-saving. When properly broiled under a gas flame, meats are attractively browned outside, juicy inside, and have a plump, full appearance.

Point-conscious cooks will use a 350° F. oven for broiling, instead of turning the flame high. Not only do high temperatures shrink the meat, but waste points and precious fuel which has gone to war. If you are using "bottled" or "tank" gas, remember it is doing war work in factories and on the battlefronts.

Here is a time-table for broiling. Set gas broiler at 350° F. and maintain constant temperature throughout the broiling period.

Meat	Weight	Cooking Time
Pounds	Rare	Medium
Beef
Chuck Steak—
1 inch	2½	24
1½ inches	4	40
Rib Steak—
1 inch	1½	15
2 inches	2¾	35
Club Steak—
1 inch	1	15
2 inches	1½	35
Sirloin Steak—
1 inch	3	20
2 inches	5¾	40
Porterhouse—
1 inch	2	20
2 inches	5	40
Lamb
Shoulder Chops—
1 inch	3 oz.	12
2 inches	10 oz.	22
Rib Chops—
1 inch	3 oz.	12
2 inches	5 oz.	22
Loin Chops—
1 inch	3 oz.	12
1½ inches	5 oz.	18

Lamb chops are not served rare. Ham is always cooked well done; it requires about 25-30 minutes for a slice 1 inch thick. The time for broiling bacon is influenced by personal preference as to crispness.

What causes washing machines to break down?

Answer...

Recent surveys reveal that overloading causes more washing machine breakdowns than any other reason!

It's easy to avert a breakdown due to overloading:

Do not fill the tub of your washer beyond capacity. It is important that in order not to overload your washer you follow the manufacturer's recommendations. Most washers have a water line indicated. This line shows the depth the water should be after the clothes have been put in the tub.

PICKLES GIVE ZEST TO WARTIME MEALS

Some persons look upon the pickle family as "food value squander bugs," but Gladys Kimbrough, authority on canning and Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, gives sound reasons for including them in every home canning plan. In a recent interview, Miss Kimbrough said, "Pickles and relishes are important because they add color, flavor, and zest to ration-limited meals."

"A spoon or so of finely chopped mustard pickle stirred into rich brown gravy gives high point value to low point meats. A bit of chili sauce and minced dill pickle blended with mayonnaise or with cooked salad dressing and poured over an accumulation of vegetables prevents the old acquaintances being recognized, particularly so if the vegetables are blistering hot."

"It's fun to find a tiny gherkin tucked in a mold of cottage cheese and tomato aspic, and a bowl of cream of corn soup loses its bland blankness the moment small rafts of corn, beet, or red pepper relish laden toast are floated on its surface."

"But," said Miss Kimbrough, "don't expect any pickle to do its share unless you are willing to give it the right start on its colorful career. If members of the cucumber family are made to grow too fast, or if left out of brine too long, they are likely to expand with indignation until they are all hollow! They go soft and slippery when the brine is too weak or does not cover every cucumber, and scum makes them ill—it must be removed from the brine every few days. Cucumbers and their small cousins, the gherkins, shrivel and shrink when there is too much salt in the brine and if given too much sugar at any time."

Cucumbers must be cured in brine for several weeks, in order to be firm, solid, crisp, and olive green throughout. Persons who are not too concerned with quality use short cuts, but Miss Kimbrough expressed the opinion that those who do not want to go to the trouble of brining should confine their efforts to relishes, fruit pickles, and sauces, all of which are simple to make. However, it should be kept in mind that good relish makers test by taste because even the most reliable of recipes may require more or less spice and vinegar than indicated. The vinegar should be not less than 40 percent nor more than 60 percent grain strength. Unless the recipe calls for another kind, use apple-cider vinegar.

Usually, whole spices are preferred to ground ones, but nowadays one must be satisfied with whatever is available. It is advisable to tie the spices, loosely, in a piece of thin cloth so that they can be removed before the pickles or relishes are canned. All foods containing vinegar should be canned in jars with glass or vacuum seal lids and must be hot when canned, or else processed 20 to 30 minutes at simmering, in order to obtain an airtight seal.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I don't blame the fellows overseas for gettin' all het up over it, Judge. For the likes of me I can't see what's all the hurry about holdin' these local prohibition elections while they're away."

"I agree with you, Steve. Time after time...in their letters, in articles, in polls taken to get the views of our fighting men...they have indicated in unmistakable terms that they don't want any action taken on prohibition, either local or national, until they get back."

"Too bad there isn't a law or somethin' to be sure their wishes are carried out, Judge."

"There is in one state I know of, Steve. Just recently it passed a law prohibiting the calling of any prohibition election until a year after the peace is declared."

"That really makes sense to me, Judge."

Hands for Victory

This symbolic picture dramatically shows American dairy farmers as they pledge themselves to meet the Government's goal of 12 1/2 billion pounds of milk for 1944 in order that our fighting men, our allies and our civilian population shall not suffer for want of milk and dairy products.

Left to right, the hands—and faces—belong to: William C. Wittmus, Harry Yates, Herman Haas, Leo Brancamp, Carrol Hawver, Henry Hawver and Arnold Wittmus. All are producers within the Chicago area.

The entire month of June has been set aside as nationwide Dairy Month, and according to Carl F. Deysenroth, executive director of the Milk Foundation, Chicago, throughout the United States, tribute will be paid to such men as these in recognition of the fact that, faced with the greatest demand for milk in the history of the world, and despite labor shortages and the scarcity of farm equipment, the dairy farmer is in the front line of production, working twenty-four hours a day—for Victory!

THE POCKETBOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

THE mighty Babe has returned. No, we are not referring to Babe Ruth. We are turning to Babe Didrikson Zaharias, without any question the most remarkable woman athlete of all time. The Babe, while practicing for the next ladies' tennis championship, returned to the headlines of golf in Chicago recently, where she continued to hit the ball incredible distances, from 260 to 290 yards.

Babe Didrikson

It has been exactly 12 years since Babe startled big crowds in the 1932 Olympic games, held in Los Angeles. The Babe was then entered in the hurdles, the high jump and the javelin throw. She wanted to enter three other events but she was balked by Olympic rules that limit the number of competitions for any single person.

Just after the 1932 Olympics were over, I played golf with the Babe. Her long game was magnificent and her short game a nightmare. At that time she could neither chip nor putt with a 20 handicap player but she was driving over 250 yards and playing 170 yard holes with a mashie or a six iron.

The Babe has come a long way in her golf since 1932, although her long game is still the feature of her play where she can keep pace with most of the longer hitters among the pros.

Her wrestler husband, George Zaharias, displacement 270 pounds, is lucky to get within 40 yards of any tee shot his wife may happen to hit. The Babe weighed 125 pounds in 1932 and she is now up around 150, but there isn't half an ounce of fat on her frame.

All Around Phenomenon

Here are a few things Babe Didrikson could do on her way to the spotlight:

Throw a baseball 315 feet, on a par with any good big league outfielder.

Run, jump and chuck the javelin in record time and measurements.

Carry a football through a good line and throw a forward pass accurately 50 yards. Swim and dive within a fraction of championship standards.

Hit a tennis ball harder than Helen Wills or Alice Marble. And play pretty well.

Drive a golf ball from 260 to 290 yards and hit a 3 iron well over 200 yards. Ask Bobby Jones or Billy Burke.

A good rifle shot and a good horsewoman.

All in all, we once figured out 16 sports in which she excelled, proving 12 of these in motion pictures that were all carefully and accurately made.

As a kid around 20 she could out-box and out-punch any lightweight in her vicinity. She almost wrecked two well known professional lightweights in less than three rounds.

We keep forgetting. She was also picked as the best woman basketball player in the history of the southwest.

The total list seems to include track and field, football, baseball, boxing, golf, tennis, basketball, swimming, diving and a few others.

Should Have Concentrated

There is no telling what heights Babe Didrikson might have reached if she had only concentrated on some single sport, especially golf or tennis. She has already turned in a 66 at golf, but her short game has never had quite the steadiness that her long game carried, with power on a par with the best of the pros and far beyond the average good amateur.

Babe Didrikson's power and control comes from an amazing amount of coordination, remarkable timing and two strong, sinewy hands and wrists that are beyond the average strong male. You might ask a famous golf pro about a friendly scuffle, where the Babe nailed him with a short right hook to the body and he had to cancel his golf engagements for the next week.

In any event it is good to have the Babe back with us again in competition. She is the most remarkable competitive proposition her sex has ever known if you care to take in 10 or a dozen fields of play. The main pity is that she scattered her talents into too many directions, in place of concentrating on two or three games.

Horses vs. Humans

How would a member of the so-called human race compare with a horse, age for age? Who would finish on top? We are now referring to competitors among both breeds, when it comes to speed and stamina. The answer is, there would be no competition. The horse would win, backing in. A race horse at seven-years old approximates a man at 45, and one from 15 to 17 years old is about in the same age class as a man of 80.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE coming All-American golf tournament at Tam O'Shanter in Chicago promises to be one of the greatest sports spectacles of the year.

The world's top-flight golfers will shoot for a tournament purse amounting to $42,587.50 in war bonds and stamps. That is sufficient incentive to draw the best of the field. Some of the top-ranking pros will be unable to leave their posts in the services, but as many as possible will be on hand for Mr. George S. May's extravaganza.

Slated for August 21-27, the annual classic—Open, Amateur and Women's Open—will be played in accord with United States Golf association rules. The top prize for amateurs of both sexes will be $100 in war stamps. May would be more than pleased to increase that latter figure for the simon pures, but the powers that be of the association frown upon such a procedure. So May decided to accept the edict.

World Champion

The winner of the All-American Open will be (somewhat gloriously) acclaimed world champion golfer of 1944. He will receive $6,800 in war bonds as first prize in the All-American Open plus $6,662.50 in war bonds as world champion—a total of $13,462.50, maturity value. That comfortable little nest egg is the all-time record first prize.

"The world champion golfer of 1944" will have won that title in the equivalent of a playoff, inasmuch as the contestants in the All-American Open, last big tournament of 1944, will include all winners of the year's major meets.

Other prizes in the Open will range downward from $5,000 in war bonds for second place to $1,000 for tenth place and $331.25 for twentieth place. Prizes in the Women's Open will include awards of $500, $400, $300 and $200 in war bonds and many smaller prizes in war stamps.

1943 Winners

Last year's All-American tournaments drew entrants from 37 states and set an all-time record for golf-meet attendance with a thundering herd of 67,000 spectators. Sales of war bonds and stamps at the tournament totaled nearly a million dollars. Winners were Jug McSpaden in the Open, Dale Morey in the Amateur and Patty Berg in the Women's Open. McSpaden, after tying with Buck White at 282 for the Open lead, won the playoff, ousting the defending double champion, Byron Nelson, who won the tournament in 1941 and repeated in 1942, after a playoff with Clayton Heafner.

It's going to be a tough tournament. The winner will have earned his victory. The prizes awarded so lavishly by May, president of Tam O'Shanter, are an ample guarantee of a rugged field.

All three tournaments will be 72-holes medal play. Fields will be reduced to 24 in the Amateur, 24 in the Women's Open and 80 in the men's open (plus ties) after 18-hole qualifying rounds to be played the first three days of the tournament.

SPORTS SHORTS

Bill McKechnie says he never has bet a penny on a baseball game.

The Sacramento ball club is owned by 210 stockholders, including laborers and street car conductors, who bought shares in the club for $50.

Only 13 of the 72 players in the 1943 opening day lineups answered the call in the Southern association's 1944 opening games.

Pitchers Hal Newhouser, Dizzy Trout and Walter Beck of the Detroit Tigers are three of the best pool players in the major leagues.

The sad state of the heavyweight boxing situation is evidenced by the headlines given Lou Nova in some of the bigger cities.

Post favorites in racing win about 30 per cent of the time.

Manufacturers say that the ball used by the major leagues this year is from 8 to 10 feet "longer" than the 1943 product.

Adam Walsh, new assistant football coach at Notre Dame, won four Maine championships and tied for three others in eight years as head coach at Bowdoin.

The football game between Pennsylvania and Duke next September 30 will be the first meeting in the history of the two universities.

Green Light for Private Forestry

Shortage of Forestry Products Is Serious

Recent actions by congress greatly encourage timberland owners, foresters and the lumbermen who long have been supporting a national program of private forestry, W. DuB. Brookings of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States points out.

Private forestry means the growing of trees as a commercial enterprise, rather than landscaping or the planting of ornamental trees. The hazards of the business, such as fires, insects, tree diseases and the many years before trees mature, are so obvious that there are some who say that the government ought to own the forests. As an alternative to outright government ownership, they advocate complete federal control of forest practices covering growing and cutting on all privately owned timberlands.

Either of these alternatives would be a serious matter for the cause of private enterprise. It would take an enormous area out of the free, competitive field. The forest areas of the United States actually exceed the tilled farm lands. In number of employees and investments, forest product enterprises rank fifth among American industries.

By the recent passage of a measure authorizing greatly increased funds for fire prevention, congress has gone a long way toward removing what is recognized as the greatest deterrent to the progress of private forestry—fire.

A basic principle of this new fire protection legislation is equal contributions by the federal government on the one hand and by the states and private owners on the other. The late Senator McNary of Oregon was instrumental in enactment of a law based on that principle 20 years ago, but there were inadequate funds to make it effective. It is to be regretted that the senator did not live to see the passage of his recent bill for greatly increased funds.

Farmers will need more than six billion board feet of lumber in 1944, but they'll have to take action themselves if the critical overall lumber and pulpwood shortage is to be met. War Food Administrator Marvin Jones has announced that if production and distribution of farm crops are to supply essential needs this year, American farmers will be called upon for two lines of procedure: First, increasing lumber production from farm woodlands during the winter, and second, providing labor for forest industries during the slack winter season on farms.

Substitute Provided

For Steamed Bonemeal

Because of the shortage of bonemeal as a source of phosphorus in poultry rations, tests conducted at the Texas agricultural experiment station are of particular interest to poultry raisers.

The non-variable portion of each ration was made up of the usual proportions. Each ration contained an estimated 18 per cent protein, and a calcium-phosphorus ratio of 1.6:1.

The results show clearly that the average gains and feed required to produce a unit of gain were almost alike in each of the paired lots.

By comparison of the gains, feed efficiency and mortality, it is indicated that the use of twice the amount of defluorinated superphosphate actually needed to furnish an optimum of phosphorus in the ration will produce no ill effect and will not hinder feed utilization.

It was concluded, that in broiler ration steamed bonemeal can be satisfactorily replaced by defluorinated superphosphate of the quality used in this trial. The presence or lack of an animal protein did not influence the comparative efficiency of the steamed bonemeal and the defluorinated superphosphate.

Tomato Harvest

With the tomato harvest already under way in some states, growers will do well to follow picking and packing practices that reduce skin breaks and resulting decay in tomatoes, says the War Food administration.

These practices include picking tomatoes when they are "mature-green," avoiding harvesting during wet weather, if possible, and using crates with the smooth side of the slats on the inside. Immature tomatoes have been found more susceptible to skin breaks than those picked "mature-green."

Bette Davis and Sec'y Morgenthau thrilling the uniformed men at the Hollywood Canteen . . . Dinah Shore thrashing nine ditties for them . . . Bonita Granville showing Lt. Joe Wade the cine-magicians. He's all mended from that New Guinea crackup . . . Ella Logan's real tears as she microphoned "That Old Feeling" to the China-Burma-India sector via the Mail Call program, which isn't heard by the public here . . . Veronica Lake, tiny as a doll, floating to the rhythms of Emil Coleman's and Phil Ohman's crews at the Mocambo . . . Lovely Marianne O'Brien of the Warners' factory surrounded by Marines in the Clover Club . . . Miriam Hopkins at La Rue with her constant companion, who never was itemed as her favorite male. He's a Greek biggie . . . Bob Hope and his Johnny Weismuller hair-do. "No cracks," he warns with a threatening finger, "I'm doing a pirate picture."

Marshal Rommel (according to Britishers who made their escape back to our lines) has a sense of humor, he thinks . . . He made several British officers attend his frequent lectures, during which he affected a pose that the Battle of Africa was a sporting event. He would give these prisoners a testimonial dinner with all the pomp he could muster on the desert. Big entrances, place cards, introductions, salutes and so on . . . And then, while the German staff dined on excellent cuisine, the British prisoners were served a meal consisting of their own K-rations captured with them. Rommel also delighted in pointing out their errors and why they were captives. He was asked by a correspondent: "To what do you credit your success? How will the enemy ever beat you?" . . . With a gleam in his monocled eye Rommel replied: "The German Army is great because of its great organization. I know exactly when I will enter a town. One month ahead I know what suite I will have in which hotel. If, however, some day, I march into a place and go to my suite and find another German general—then I will know we are licked!"

The "Oklahoma" cast is reported doing so much ad libbing that "they are spoiling the show." Guild execs shrug and say: "Look at the box office. . . The New York Post Office has broken all records in the district. To date this year it has done business totaling 103 millions . . . The book now on FDR's bedside table is "Rendezvous with Destiny." The only comment on the book appeared in a Chicago paper briefly and a story in the Christian Science Monitor. Not a single review has appeared on it yet . . . Hepburn's newest interest, they say, is a famed polo player . . . Add ditty similarities: "Time Waits for No One" and "Tales from Vienna Woods" . . . Lana Turner won't bark about it until she sees it here, but those delicious canapes Ray Bourbon served with cocktails the other sundown were made from dog food . . . R-R-Ruff-Ruff!

The Late Watch: Shirley Ross and her husband, Kenneth Dolan (who parted last season), are happier than ever. They reconciled after he was quoted here as saying the fault was all his because: "I neglected my wife instead of my clients" . . . There will be a copyright war over U. S. rights to the song popular with the troops, "Lili Marlene" . . . Douglas Miller, who wrote "You Can't Do Business With Hitler," told OWI chiefs that the war with Germany will last at least another year and with Japan two . . . T. Casey, the B'klyn Citizen editor, has written two songs with Johnny Tucker of Hook and Ladder Co. 117 in Astoria . . . All major networks banned the song, "Don't Change Horses," which has nothing to do with politics. It has been networked since April. The authors wrote "Mairzy Doats."

Quotation Marksmanship: Noel Coward: The most terrifying thing to a man is a woman who cries in advance . . . E. Hemingway: The saddest thing in the world is the affection of man and woman; the most fortunate ending is by death . . . J. Porter: She winches him around her finger . . . Mable Bandy: Eye-lashes that could sweep the cobwebs from any man's heart . . . L. Corning: Low clouds on the verge of tears.

Sallies in Our Alley: Bob Dunn's office boy requested the afternoon off (on the day of a double-header) saying: "Boss—my grandmother—" . . . Dunn cut him short: "Oh, come now, son. You're not going to pull that chestnut about your grandmother being dead?" . . . "No, sir," was the reply. "She's home on furlough!" . . . At La Conga some velvet-knockers were gabbing about a gal whose beauty was in dispute . . . "She looks," said an admirer, "like something from Vogue!" . . . "a rejection slip."

Railroads Forced to Turn Down Over-Sized Freight

Twice in recent years the railroads have been unable to accept pieces of freight for transportation because of their large size. In one case, a giant oil tank had to be towed from Hoboken up the Hudson and through the New York state barge canal and the Great Lakes to Chicago.

In the other case, the large pipes for Boulder dam, owing to their 30-foot diameter, had to be fabricated at the site in a plant erected for the purpose.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Add new rubber-producing plants: the ficus pumila linn and the Chromomorphia macrophylla. Both widely grown in China, if anyone is interested in these tongue twisters!

The peoples of the world should be the ultimate beneficiaries of the war-born, large-scale competition between natural rubber and synthetic rubber, in the opinion of John L. Collier, president of B. F. Goodrich. He anticipates that this benefit may be in the form of lower-cost materials to the public and the wider use of rubber made possible by its low cost in many new applications.

SPARKY WATTS

By BOODY ROGERS

If you are one who likes to take an assortment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to box springs and there you are with everything at hand.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery material in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the satin lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

NOTE—These directions for making a bedside bag are from BOOK 8 of the series of booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. This book also contains illustrated directions for more than 30 other useful things to make for your home and for gifts. To get a copy send 15 cents with name and address to:

WARTIME ESSENTIAL—YOUR OWN HOME-CANNED TOMATOES

Let there be no doubt about it, loss of home-canned tomatoes is unnecessary at any time and inexcusable in war-time, unnecessary because spoilage is caused by carelessness in selecting, preparing, packing, and canning, or by not following the manufacturer's instructions for using jars and caps, inexcusable because wasting food is wicked.

Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, advises home canners to put up large quantities of tomatoes and explains how failures can be avoided. "First of all, use jars that were made for home canning and use them according to the simple step-by-step instructions furnished by the manufacturer—commercial cast-offs are expensive in the long run. Get the jars and caps ready before preparing the tomatoes.

"Next, get your water-bath canner ready. A deep kettle, lard can, metal bucket or pail, or wash boiler will do if it has a cover and something to keep the jars from touching the bottom. A home-made wire or wooden rack will serve the latter purpose. The water in the canner must be steaming (not boiling) when the jars are lowered into it, and deep enough to cover the tops of the jars one or more inches.

"Use locally grown, garden-fresh, red-ripe tomatoes. Examine every tomato. Those having small spots or raw weather cracks may be set aside to use in chili sauce but should not be used for canning. Wash the tomatoes clean before they are scalded for skinning and scald enough at a time to fill two quart jars and no more.

"Scalding takes from one-half to one minute and the easiest way is to put the tomatoes in the center of a square of cheese cloth, then gather up the cloth by its four corners and lower the tomatoes into a kettle of boiling water. Suit your own pleasure about dipping the scalded tomatoes into cold water. They are a bit more comfortable to handle if cold dipped. Cut all the core and any healed weather cracks out of a tomato, then slip off the skin, remove the black spot at the blossom end and any green or white spots that may show after the skin is off.

"Drop the tomato into a clean hot jar. Cut it into two or more pieces if it is too large to go through the

G. I. JOE READINGST GUY IN THE WORLD

In a recent issue of the Publishers' Auxiliary, Capt. John L. Scherer of the Army Air Corps, who has served in many battle areas since he entered the service in 1940 says that "G. I. Joe" is the readingest guy in the world—the news hungriest. In any bivouac area, anywhere, there will be a group of our fighting men straining their eyes in the dusk, rereading newspapers and magazines, and even letters, many of them months old. On the air, the news round up has priority over the hottest jive or the funniest comedian.

At any of the global outposts where United States soldiers are stationed, after letters and packages from home, the next most popular thing looked for is a newspaper from home. Magazines are enjoyed, but the No. 1 choice of the soldier overseas is the community paper which brings him news of what's happening in his immediate home area and of the doings of his friends and neighbors. The paper may be a month old when it reaches him, but every G. I. Joe reads every line of it. It's his home paper and the next best thing to a letter from Ma and Pa and the Girl Friend.

METHOD OF ASSIGNING WORK

The method of assigning work that is used at many summer camps often goes well within the family.

Show the youngsters how their aid will make it possible for mother to give more time to the Victory garden, or work part time in a factory or store, or free her to have some real playtime with the children themselves. Then, on a blackboard or a sheet of paper, write the jobs expected of each child during a specified period. Some children like to be surprised with a different task each day, others like to perfect themselves at one job.

It is important that a child understand how to do any work that is given to him. Be sure, therefore, that the job and how to do it is explained so that he understands fully and clearly. Then when the job is done, reward the child with praise, and let mother tell what she herself has been able to do in the time which his help has been given her. Money or other rewards should not be necessary when the youngsters see that "helping mother" also serves the greater purpose of helping the war.
